Kobe

The spirit that supported recovery from disaster

Kobe suffered extensive damage after the Great Hanshin earthquake. With the passion of its citizens and the support of the world, Kobe has recovered and now is a bustling city that shows no signs of the prior damage. In memory of the city's recovery and rebuilding, an illumination event called Kobe Luminarie is held each December. A visit will light up your spirit and remind you of those who helped make Kobe what it is today.

The neighborhood alive with modern Western culture

It has been 150 years since the opening of the port of Kobe. To enjoy the vestiges of that time period, head over to Former Foreign Settlement or Kitano Ijinkan, where the western-style 19th-century architecture remains. The mansions built by these early foreign residents line the streets, and provide an opportunity to see modern western culture in this Japanese port city.

The waterside, meanwhile, offers its own variety of sightseeing spots. Shop in the bustling and fashionable Kobe Harborland center, or take unforgettable photos at Meriken Park - the unique shapes of Kobe Port Tower and Kobe Maritime Museum make for stunning subjects.

Beautiful gourmet dishes nurtured by cultured Kobe citizens

The port of Kobe served as the gateway of foreign culture and entertainment for the city's early international residents; the spread of coffee, western-style desserts, movies, jazz, soccer, and more throughout Japan was made possible thanks to Kobe. Even the now-internationally renowned Kobe beef, with its intense marbling and hint of sweetness, is said to have been "discovered" by a foreign resident at that time.

Kobe is also famous throughout Japan for its sweets and breads; walking through the city, you're sure to see numerous unique bakeries and cake shops with lines out the door. Take your time strolling through Kobe, and enjoy corner cafes and the stunning arrays of desserts in a city that incorporated 19th century western culture in its own special way. Happiness awaits in Kobe!

📍 Mt. Rokko & Arima Hot Spring

Mt. Rokko range, the backdrop to Kobe's cityscape, is the perfect place to experience farms, ropes adventure, and other outdoor activities. An observation deck offers stunning panoramas of the Kobe skyline, with the Seto Inland Sea in the background. The night view from Mt. Rokko is famous throughout Japan - city lights sparkle like diamonds you will never forget.

Arima Hot Spring, connected to Mt. Rokko via ropeway, is one of the Japan's oldest hot spring towns. It appears in historical texts as far back as the 7th century, and is itself a slice of history, having hosted numerous powerful figures. The best way to enjoy this town and its rows of traditional houses is via a stroll in your yukata.

Just a five-minute walk from JR Shin-Kobe Station, Nunobiki Falls was named one of the 100 Waterfalls of Japan

Nada Sake Breweries

The Nada area of Kobe has been home to numerous sake breweries for around 600 years, and is still Japan's top sake-producing region. The fresh and clear spring water from Mt. Rokko results in a sake that can't be tasted anywhere else.

Around 1900, meanwhile, during the peak of the music box's popularity in the West, many international residents of Kobe spent their days off listening to the familiar tones of these boxes and reminiscing about their home countries. At Rokko International Music Box Museum, you can learn about their history and even make your own music box.

📍 Akashi Kaikyo Bridge

With a total length of 3,911 meters, Akashi Kaikyo Bridge is well known as the world's longest suspension bridge. Visitors can walk Maiko Marine Promenade, or even take a tour to the top of one of the towers. It is also known as the Pearl Bridge for the 28 dazzling light patterns that illuminate the bridge like a jewel.

Exploring history at Himeji Castle

With over 400 years of history, Himeji Castle is indisputably one of Japan's most famous castles. Visitors here will see an excellent example of Japan's unique castle structure in near-entirety. The beauty of the wooden construction is unlike anything else in the world, and it has been recognized as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Himeji Castle hides a number of tricks designed to protect the keep. To confuse enemies, for example, the castle grounds there are three complicated, sprawling layers of walls and moats creating a labyrinthine complex that is rare even among Japanese castles. The centrally located main keep (Daitenshu) has five layers but houses six floors plus a basement, rises 92 meters above sea level; three small keeps face east, west, and northwest and boast their own layered roofs. Because the gleaming white of the expansive castle walls is said to resemble a heron spreading its wings, the castle is also commonly known as the "White Heron Castle." Parts of the castle, notably the two pillars of the main keep, are built entirely with wooden materials intricately fitted together using some of the most advanced woodworking techniques of the period. Every visitor should be sure to climb to the top of the main keep and take in the wondrous views of the city of Himeji.

Understand the soul of Japan through cultural experiences

Kokoen Garden

Located in short walking distance from Himeji Castle, Kokoen Garden allows visitors to see an historical Japanese aesthetic sense up close without leaving the city center. It is comprised of nine large and small gardens, such as the Oyashiki-no-Niwa with its tranquil pond, Nagare-no-Hiraniwa with its beautiful river. There are tree-lined paths and plazas, and the garden in beautiful year-round: cherry blossoms in spring, tender greens in summer, and deep red leaves in autumn. A teahouse offers a matcha tea experience for 500 yen. You can even easily rent a kimono nearby and enjoy the garden in traditional wear.

Himeji Castle Surrounding Area

About ten-minute walk from Himeji Castle, Himeji City Museum of Literature was designed by world-renowned architect Ando Tadao. On display inside are works of local authors and scholars. Nagoyama Stupa houses ashes of the Buddha - a gift to the city from former Indian Prime Minister Nehru as a wish for eternal peace for humankind. In addition to the striking exterior, the inside houses rows of seated statues of Buddha well worth a look. At Japan Toy Museum, which is home to over 90,000 artifacts, visitors can actually try their hand at games inside.

Shoshazan Engyoji Temple

Boasting more than 1,000 years of history, Shoshazan Engyoji is one of western Japan's most prominent temples. A visit here will give you a rare opportunity to see precious historical structures, from the impressive Maniden hall nestled in the mountainside of Shoshazan to the Jogyodo, registered as an Important Cultural Property of Japan. The area has long been known as a site for ascetic training, and thus has a deep, solemn atmosphere that is ideal for experiencing ancient traditions such as zazen meditation or sutra writing. You can even dine on shojin ryori, a type of cuisine made without the foods that monks are prohibited from eating, such as fish and meat. Lastly, take the ropeway that takes you to the peak of Shoshazan to take in colorful and ever-changing panoramas of the city of Himeji.

Himeji cuisine

To enjoy the best of Himeji's cuisine, visitors should try local oden dipped in ginger soy sauce. The area around the city is the largest producer of Yamada Nishiki rice (the preferred rice for sake-making), and thus considered the birthplace of Japanese sake and home to a treasure trove of local varieties. And since the successive family heads of Himeji Castle have had an affinity for tea ceremonies, it's also a great place to bring home souvenirs of traditional Japanese sweets.

Himeji souvenirs

There are many great options for Himeji souvenirs, such as unique, milky-white cowhide leather crafts, or somen noodles hand-pulled according to techniques passed down for about 600 years.
