Tokyo is undoubtedly one of the most exciting cities in the world. Centuries-old traditions mingle with the latest in modern Japanese culture for an exciting blend that can be experienced nowhere else. The Tokyo Metropolitan Area is the world's largest urban population, with 13 million people living in Tokyo proper alone. There are countless ways to explore Tokyo, but to truly experience the pulse of the city we recommend you take in a walking tour and explore the many sites and sounds of the Tokyo heartbeat on your own.

This guidebook maps out 11 model courses designed to help first-time visitors enjoy the best the city has to offer as well as 5 courses that take you just beyond the city boundaries. For further details, please visit the following websites.

Asakusa, which served as Tokyo’s downtown area in the 1600-1800s, still offers a taste of “Old Edo,” with narrow back streets, and row upon row of old-style buildings and shops peddling traditional wares like kimono and hand-made combs. Nakamise-Shopping Arcade provides a colorful shopping experience and is the perfect place to pick up beautifully crafted souvenirs. Nearby Sensoji Temple, also known as the Asakusa Kannon Temple, takes its name from the Kannon, or the Goddess of Mercy, to whom main hall is dedicated. The temple is said to have been founded in the 7th century by three fishermen who discovered a tiny 5-centimeter-high image of Kannon in their net while out fishing. The Asakusa Shrine was built in their memory.

Annual Events in Asakusa

There are festivals in Asakusa almost every month. Listed below are some of the biggest events held in Asakusa.

January 1:  Hatsumode, the year’s first shrine or temple visit
February 3:  Setsubun, bean throwing ceremony
March 18:  Kinryu no Mai, dragon dance performance
Mid-April:  Yabusame, archery on horseback at Sumida Park

Mid-May:  Sanja festival, one of the biggest festivals in Tokyo
End of July:  Sumida River Fireworks Display
Last Saturday in August:  Asakusa Samba Carnival
December 17-19:  Hagoita-ichi, Battledore Fair
by order of the third Tokugawa Shogun. The Edo Shitamachi Traditional Crafts Museum displays more than 370 works of art made by craftspeople of the Asakusa area. Shopping along Rokku Broadway and Orange-dori Street on the way to Asakusa Station is another great way to enjoy Asakusa.
The Imperial Palace, formerly Edo Castle, is still surrounded by its original innermost moat. Courtly gates and old guard towers are set at intervals around the grounds. Access to the main entrance is over the elegant Nijubashi Bridge (Double Bridge) and is open to the public on special occasions. Ruins of the central keep of the old Edo Castle can be found in the East Garden (Higashi Gyoen), which is a spectacle in itself with its countless plant and flower varieties—it’s also an ideal spot to relax. The National Museum of Modern Art displays art works of the 20th century, while the five-story Science Museum houses three-dimensional displays of exhibits covering all fields of modern science from space science to agriculture.

East Garden
When it comes to meal option, Tokyo simply offers too many! One of the most enjoyable experiences, though, would be to try sushi at one of the restaurants on Uogashi-Yokocho street, which runs along the world-renowned Tsukiji Fish & Grocery Market. You can also visit the market, where more than 450 types of shellfish and fish are traded by wholesalers. Close by is the Hamarikyu Garden, a well-known park characteristic of the Edo Period and the Tokugawa Shogunate.
Nihombashi was developed as a commercial center in the Edo period. Many long established stores dot the area. Starting from Tokyo Station, the Bridgestone Museum of Art houses an excellent collection of Western art as well as Western-style Japanese paintings from the Meiji period. Strolling along Chuo-dori, don’t miss the Kite Museum behind the COREDO shopping mall. This small museum displays 3,000 kinds of kites from throughout the nation. Nihombashi Bridge was originally built in 1603 by Ieyasu Tokugawa, founder of the Tokugawa Shogunate, and is a symbol of the Edo period. The bridge is the starting point of a national network of roads. Mitsui Memorial Museum, located inside of the Mitsui Main Building - itself an Important Cultural Property - displays Japanese and Asian artworks, mainly related to the tea ceremony. A walk through Nihombashi isn’t complete without making a stop in Mitsukoshi, a department store with a 340 year history.

Department Stores
Japanese department stores offer superb service and a vast selection of merchandise, from basement food emporiums and designer clothing to crafts and household goods. Many hold frequent art and craft exhibitions, boast rooftop playgrounds, offer dining venues and have promotion halls with special sales of discounted merchandise.
The wooded area adjacent to the Park Exit of JR Ueno Station is Ueno-Onshi Park. Inside there are many museums and other facilities, including the Ueno Zoo.

Across from the fountain is the Tokyo National Museum, one of Japan's most important museums. It's famous for the variety of the collection and the splendor of each special exhibit.

Next door is the Tokyo University of the Arts. The university has produced many great artists and the University Art Museum, located on the campus, houses a vast collection art which includes valuable student works. The gallery-shop, Geidai Art Plaza, exhibits and sells the works of University teachers and graduates, as well as various original goods designed by them.

Around the center of the park is Toshogu Shrine, constructed for Tokugawa Ieyasu. It has withstood fire, earthquakes and war and keeps many important cultural properties, such as bronze lantern and a Chinese-style gate. A visit to the inner shrine is recommended.

The row of red torii gates, one behind another, marks the entrance of the Hanazono Inari-jinja Shrine. Nearby is Gojoten-jinja Shrine. Both are part of the same site. The former is believed to grant good relations, and the latter, good health.

Shinobazuno-ike Pond is a popular place to gather and enjoy a walk. At the southern end lies Shitamachi Museum. Though as big as some of the other museums in the park, it is the best place to make yourself familiar with the lives of Shitamachi's people and the changes the area has undergone since the Meiji period. The exhibition spaces on the first floor are home to amazing reproductions of old merchant and candy shops. There are also houses visitors are allowed to enter after taking off their shoes.

Yanaka and Nezu are known for their sloping maze of streets and alleys, which are dotted with numerous temples, old-style coffee shops, tatami weavers and a host of small museum and galleries. There is also a tofu factory and a famous old cemetery. Strolling around Yanaka and Nezu reveals a face of Tokyo that can't be found anywhere else. Yanaka Ginza is an old-fashioned shopping promenade crowded with nearly 70 small shops. Turn left at the end and enter Yomise Street. Buy something sweet or savory at one of the shops and enjoy a taste of cozy Shitamachi. Hebi-michi, literally ‘snake road,’ is a twisted and narrow street that's true to its name.

The magnificent Nezu-jinja Shrine, established 1,900 years ago, is a designated Important Cultural Property and well worth a visit. The shrine is famous for its azalea garden, which is in bloom from April to early May. The Shitamachi Museum Annex is a wooden, two-story structure, which stands out against bustling Kototoi Street. It was once was a real sake store. Jomyoin Temple is renowned for its 84,000 stone statues of Jizo, one of the Buddhist deities. Endless lines of Jizo create breathtaking views in this place of serenity.

Shinjuku is roughly divided into the West Exit area and the East Exit area. The West Exit area is a business district with rows of high-rise buildings. The Tokyo Metropolitan Government Office Building, designed by award-winning architect, Kenzo Tange, commands splendid views of the city from the observation deck in the 45-story twin towers. On a clear day you can catch a great view of Japan’s best-known landmark, Mount Fuji, but the night view is equally breathtaking. Takashimaya Times Square is one of the landmarks in this busy neon lit town.

Inside, look for a unique gadget in the Tokyo Hands department store. Or take a stroll through Shinjuku Gyoen National Park and experience a nature paradise within bustling Shinjuku.

The East Exit area is a crowded commercial area filled with department stores and the Kabuki-cho entertainment district—also known as the town that never sleeps. Eating dinner here is an experience not to be missed.

Tokyo Nightlife Options

1) Karaoke: Sing-along with recorded music. A regular karaoke establishment (called “Karaoke Box”) consists of a number of compartments, each having karaoke equipment. They also serve beverages and light food options.

2) Izakaya: Japanese-style pubs serving beer, Japanese sake, cocktails, and other alcoholic beverages alongside casual meals.

3) Pubs: European-styled spots serving beer and other types of alcoholic beverages.

4) Kabuki: A theatrical secular classical drama of Japan. The actors put on vivid makeup, spectacular costume, and settings.

* To see Kabuki:
Tickets can be purchased by telephone or at the theater box office.
Open 10:00-18:00 year-round
TEL: 03-6745-0333

5) Night Views: At the very top of Roppongi Hills Mori Tower, a 360-degree panorama of the sprawling Tokyo Metropolitan area creates the Tokyo City View, one of the most breathtaking and picturesque night views in the world. The night views from the observatory platforms of Tokyo Tower are also impressive.
Shibuya is a popular shopping and entertainment destination, especially for younger people. Start at Shibuya Station's Hachiko Exit. Don't be surprised if there's a huge crowd.
Cross the intersection to Shibuya Center Gai Street. This street is the busiest part of town, full of fast food restaurants, bars and shops. It's also a popular hangout for teenagers. Next, follow a narrow passageway called Spain Zaka to Koendori Street, which is packed with fashionable shops and department stores.
There's more to this area than shopping. It's a great place to see the latest trends in youth fashion. And the work of young Japanese artists is on display at the Shibuya Tokyo Wonder Site, an exhibition space in front of Parco.
Yoyogi Park is an oasis of beautiful flowers, fountains and bird sanctuaries tucked between the busy districts of Shibuya and Harajuku.

Meiji-jingu Shrine is nestled in the heart of an extensive wooded parkland with approximately 100,000 trees. Dedicated to Emperor and Empress Meiji, the sanctuary is a particularly fine example of Shinto architecture, and boasts the highest number of visitors in the country during the traditional New Year Holidays. Just a few minutes walk away is Takeshita-dori Street, where new youth cultures and fashions transpire on an almost daily basis. The Ota Memorial Museum of Art showcases more than 12,000 woodblock prints (Ukiyo-e) by Ota Seizo. Omotesando Hills, a new commercial complex, was opened in 2006. This center offers customers the very best in shopping and dining experience, in a stylish environment imbued with fashion, arts and culture. A stroll down Omotesando Street, lined with elegant boutiques and restaurants, will take you to the Omotesando Sta.

The Roppongi district is filled with popular nightspots packed with visitors from abroad. There are also many international restaurants, so it should be easy to find something to suit your taste. On the 53rd and uppermost floor of Roppongi Hills, you will find contemporary art exhibited in the Mori Art Museum, and on the 52nd floor is Tokyo City View where the glass-walled observatory offers a stunning 360-degree view of the city, particularly impressive at night. Nearby, Azabu Juban Shopping Street has 300 years of its history. There are nostalgic shops but also has fashionable boutiques and café. Another recommended course starts from Tokyo Midtown which consists of three zones: Galleria, Plaza and Garden Terrace. Each has shops, restaurants, offices, hotels, gardens and museums. Galleria is home to The Suntory Museum of Art and to photography exhibitions at FUJIFILM SQUARE. The National Art Center, Tokyo has an extensive collection on display in Japan's largest exhibition space. The building was designed by Kisho Kurokawa, a famous Japanese architect. There are a restaurant and a café inside, so it's a great place to stop for a break. The Mori Art Museum, the Suntory Museum of Art and The National Art Center, Tokyo form a triangle called Art Triangle Roppongi.

The sacred Mount Takao, located in western Tokyo on the eastern edge of the Kanto Mountain Range, is only an hour’s ride from the center of Tokyo. Yakuooin Temple, located on the mountainside, was established by order of Emperor Shomu in 744, and people have worshipped this temple for more than 1,200 years. Another symbolic figure of Mt. Takao is Tengu, a long-nosed mythical figure that is believed to be a deified image of a man who mastered rigorous ascetic disciplinary practice in the mountains, and acquired magical and spiritual powers. Between April and October at the Biwa-daki Falls and Hebi-daki Falls you may catch a glimpse of ascetic devotees in religious practice. To take you from the foot of the mountain to the 600-meter peak, there are seven well-maintained courses, each with a different theme. An easier option is the cable car or lift, which takes you halfway to the Takao-san Natural Zoo and Botanical Garden near the Cable Car Takao-san Station. Here, monkeys roam freely and the views are superb still. Mt. Takao is part of the Meiji-no-mori Takao Quasi-National Park.

Yokohama, Japan’s second largest city, 30 min. by train from Tokyo, was one of the first Japanese cities to open up to foreign residents during the Meiji Era (1868-1912). It remains today a bustling port city with numerous historic buildings. Enjoy a stroll down Motomachi Shopping Street. The Foreign Cemetery consists of some 3,000 graves of famed foreign residents who contributed to Japan’s opening to the world. The Harbor View Park is a hilltop park which offers a great view of the harbor area. Yokohama’s China Town, bordered by four beautiful Chinese gates facing each in compass direction, offers about 500 restaurants and shops to choose from. Yamashita Park, the oldest seaside park in Japan, stretches for about 1,000 meters along the Yokohama Harbor. There you can see the Hikawa Maru, a 12,000-ton passenger ship used from 1930 to 1960. From the park, you can take the “Sea Bass,” to the hugely popular “Minato Mirai 21” district—a shopper and gourmand heaven. The Landmark Tower here is the second tallest building in Japan as of 2015, with the rooftop “Sky Garden,” which commands view that, well, just has to be seen to be believed.

Kamakura, an hour by rail from Tokyo, is a small quiet coastal town with tranquil temples. Once the seat of the feudal government set up in 1192, the town still retains much of its ancient and historical heritage. Exploring at your own pace is the best way to take in all Kamakura has to offer. There are five famous temples in the area. A leisurely stroll slips you back to the 12th century Kamakura Period. Engakuji Temple, founded in 1282 was built to commemorate the deaths of both Japanese and Mongolian soldiers killed during the Mongol’s attempt to invade Japan. Kenchoji Temple, founded in 1253, features a Chinese-style design. Near Kamakura Station is Tsurugaoka Hachimangu Shrine, where the view of the city of Kamakura from the Hongu, or the main building, is magnificent. The Kamakura Museum of National Treasures displays more than 2,000 treasures belonging to temples throughout the area, with exhibits changing monthly. Kamakura’s most famous attraction though has to be the giant bronze Great Buddha. Famous for its wooden principal building and a beautiful Japanese garden, Hasedera Temple wins tops honors for its sheer beauty. Nearby Enoshima is a small island with a perimeter of 4 kilometers that protrudes into Sagami Bay.
Attracting more than 9 million visitors per year, Tsurugaoka Hachimangu Shrine is the greatest symbol of the old capital city, Kamakura. The shrine was founded by Minamoto Yoriyoshi, ancestor of Shogun Minamoto Yoritomo who established the Kamakura Feudal Government that ruled Japan between 1192 and 1333.
The famous open-air Great Buddha, or “Daibutsu,” is 11.31 meters high and weighs 121 tons. It is constructed of bronze plates bolted together around a hollow frame, and you can climb inside. It was completed in 1252, under the orders of Minamoto Yoritomo, who wanted to rival the larger Nara Buddha.

Two hours by train from Tokyo, Nikko is both a gem of natural beauty and home to one of the must-sees of Japanese architecture: Toshogu Shrine. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1999, the shrine, completed in 1636 and dedicated to the founder of the Tokugawa Shogunate, is Nikko’s most famous attraction. Most of its buildings are designated as National Treasures and Important Cultural Properties. Shinkyo Bridge, or the Sacred Bridge, arches gracefully over the Daiya River. Lake Chuzenji is especially beautiful in early May for its cherry blossoms, and in October for its autumnal foliage. A five-minute walk from Chuzenji Onsen bus stop is Kegon Falls, one of the most famous waterfalls in Japan. You can even get close to the base of the waterfall by elevator. Another 15-minute walk will take you to Chuzenji Temple, which houses the famous statue of the One-Thousand-Armed Goddess.

Hakone, 1 hour and 30 minutes by rail from Tokyo’s Shinjuku Station, is a famous hot spring resort area set in the beautiful Fuji-Hakone Izu National Park. A major attraction here is the Hakone Open-Air Museum, with hundreds of 19th and 20th century sculptures by Western and Japanese artists. One stop on the Hakone Tozan Railway to Gora will take you to the center of the Hakone area. A ride on the ropeway via Sounzan leads you to Owakudani, or the Great Boiling Valley, where steam and sulfurous fumes rise from interestingly shaped crevices in the rocks. From Togendai, take a pleasure cruise around Lake Ashinoko and marvel at the views of Mount Fuji, which at 3,776 meters, is not only Japan’s highest mountain, but the nation’s best known symbol. A walk from Hakonemachi Town on the ancient Cedar Avenue will take you to the Hakone Checkpoint, a point which safeguarded the security of Edo (now Tokyo) as the seat of the Shogunate. Here, a variety of interesting historical relics and documents are displayed.
