Hiroshima (広島), pop. 2,810,161 (as of Aug. 2019), the world-renowned “City of Peace”, is the largest city in the western end of the Japanese mainland. It is also a beautiful city, endowed with nature and an environment including the Seto Inland Sea, six rivers flowing through its mountains, and an urban area full of green.

Although it once became a burnt field because of the atomic bomb, in time, along with other Hiroshima residents, and with generous assistance from Japan and around the world, they managed to bring their city back to life.

Places To Go:

●A-Bomb Dome (原爆ドーム)

The Hiroshima Industrial Promotion Hall was constructed in 1915. This building was highly regarded for its imposing European style.

On August 6, 1945, it was instantly destroyed by the first atomic bombing in history. Flames enveloped the ceiling of the dome and consumed the entire building, killing everyone within. Parts of the wall, which withstood the blast because it came from above, together with the steel frame of its dome have become a symbol of Hiroshima. Because of its shape and circumstances, it came to be called the A-Bomb Dome. It serves as a historical witness to convey the tragedy of history's first atomic bombing and a symbol of our vow to abolish nuclear weapons, and for lasting world peace. Based on the World Heritage Convention, the A-Bomb Dome was registered on the UNESCO World Heritage list in December 1996.

Access: Board a streetcar at JR Hiroshima Sta. bound for Eba or Miyajima and get off at “Atomic Bomb Dome”.

●Peace Memorial Park (平和記念公園)

The park, which covers approximately 122,100 square meters, was completed after the war, and in February 2007 it was the first postwar park to be designated as a National Place of Scenic Beauty. Within the park visitors will find many memorials and monuments such as the Cenotaph for the A-Bomb Victims. Also inside the park grounds are the Peace Memorial Museum, the Hiroshima National Peace Memorial Hall for the Atomic Bomb Victims and the International Conference Center Hiroshima. Over 1.3 million guests visit the Peace Memorial Museum every year. There are about 19,000 pieces in the museum collection, such as scorched roof tiles, burned clothing and glass bottles that were melted by the heat. In July 2006, the museum was the first postwar building to be designated as a National Important Cultural Property.
